London's RAC Club hosted the finals of the 10th Newton Perkins' Squash Tournament on April 29th.

In a replay of their 2009 final, Cushman & Wakefield and Jones Lang LaSalle were matched up for the Main Trophy, whilst the Plate Trophy (featuring first round league losers) saw Savills play AXA Real Estate. These final four teams had won through from the original thirty entrants.

In the Plate match AXA, making their first final's appearance appeared to have the upper hand in the third string match as James Owen battled back against Freddie Corlett to level 2 v 2 before the youth of the Savills player came through.

The second string match was finely balanced at 1 v 1 before Savills' Argie Taylor again pulled away to defeat Richard Pinnock. Evergreen AXA captain, Paul Coley, battled ferociously but fell to the wiles of Savills' No.1, Richard Winter for the Savills team to retain their 2009 Plate Trophy.

The Main Trophy match started well for the JLL at No.3 with a rapid fire 3 v 1 win for the Adam Draper against Cushman's John Prestwich (a last minute stand-in for volcano "downed" David Hume). JLL's Will Evers continued the blistering start but Ollie Slack's hard hitting saw him come back to square the match for Cushman's team, setting up the No.1 strings to decide the 2010 Trophy.

JLL's Graham Lind and Cushman's premier league player, Marcus Hayes, showed nerveless quality and gripped the spectators' attention in the match lasting well over an hour. Lind carved out a 2 v 1 game position but Hayes showed spectacular reserves to dig deep to come back to win 3 v 2 and seal the honours for the Cushman side.

Guest of Honour, Richard Balfour-Lynn presented the trophies in the RAC Committee Room afterwards.
